Patient Suffering from Advanced Stage of Disease-Has No Eyebrows-Lemon Complexion.

Emil Grable, leper, is at large. He escaped Friday night from the lazaretto on the Eastern Branch, where he was confined with another. A general police alarm was sent out upon the discovery of his escape early yesterday and near-by authorities were warned. The most remarkable detail in the police description of Grable is that he has no cycbrows. A burly fellow, weighing some 200 pounds, other ravages of the disease had marked the man. His disease had marked the man. His a "are bad," says the description. Grable's arms and hands had begun to swell. A copper or lemon tint was be-ginning to change his complexion, and his voice had been affected. Grable gave himself up to Washington authorities December 10, when he calmly informed a crossing policeman of his condition. He was taken to the hospital on the Eastern Branch and coneach shift, were placed over the two

The authorities only surmise how he escaped Friday night. They take it he walked away between 7 o'clock and walked away between which hours the guard was away from the exit. Being a former railroad brakeman, it is presumed he left Washington. No trace of him was found in the search conducted vesterday by police. Dr. William C. Fowler, of the District health office, who is in charge of viru-lent diseases, declared Grable's leprosy was advanced and very contagious.
